Engineered for low-noise output and dependable cycling, Performance Wheelgun 22 features a 39-grain truncated cone bullet, and its low velocity of 770 feet per second delivers minimal recoil and noise. These features make it perfect for training new shooters or just plinking and having fun.

“Wheelgun shooters know that 22 revolvers are all about reliability and control,” says Dan Compton, Remington’s Rimfire Product Director. “Performance Wheelgun 22 is unmatched when it comes to plinking steel at high noon or testing your draw speed and first shot at the line. No matter what your endeavor, make sure you have got Performance Wheelgun 22 LR ammo in your wheelgun and your bandolier,” Compton said.

Whether shooting an heirloom 6-shooter or a modern rimfire handgun, this cartridge delivers consistent performance. Plus, it is built under Remington’s revamped rimfire processes to deliver unmatched quality in rimfire products. It’s available in durable, high-quality, 100-count sliding-lid boxes.
